Chicago Appreciates Beauty

While attending a semi-public meeting in Washington, D. C., some months ago, one of the speakers, doubtless thinking he was complimenting me, remarked "that while Chicago cared little for beautifying the city, they certainly were business getters." As Washington is very beautiful and artistic one could not but think that the speaker was ignorant of many things about Chicago. We showed twenty million dollars worth of appreciation for beauty at the last election, by voting bonds for the new park additions for the south side of the city only, and the visitor from the effete east who visits only "the loop" and hears something of the stock yards, gets an entirely wrong impression of our city. One of the chiefest duties of a Chicagoan is to have every visitor shown around the boulevard system and the parks and given an opportunity to visit our art institute, Field's museum, forest preserves, municipal pier, wonderful lake front, and a few more of our art attractions. The fact of the matter is that we are not good showmen, and allow our visitors to come and go without seeing or appreciating the beauties of our wonderful city. In fact we scarcely know or appreciate them ourselves, and there are thousands of people living here who have never visited all the parks, or made the tour of the boulevards. While our enterprise and commercial supremacy is acknowledged, we have just reason to be proud of our beautiful public and private buildings, our parks, and our natural advantages in location. When half the dream of our city beautiful is accomplished, no city in the world may compare with us, and it will all be built by Chicagoans and not assisted nearly eighty per cent. by the entire United States government, as Washington.

Mrs. M. Pan, of the Hotel Reo, has returned after motoring from Cleveland to Cincinnati, Ohio.

Walter Edwards, 255 64th st., returned last Friday from Camp Custer, Mich., where he has been in training with the National Guards, of which he is a member.

Miss Ruth Michaelis, 441 Englewood ave., recently underwent an operation on her throat at a north side hospital. She is recovering slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sullivan, 7937 S. Green st., were made happy by the arrival of a nine pound baby girl Saturday, July 28th, at St. Bernard's hospital.

Is It Fair to Jones?

Bill Jones spent $100,000 building up an industry which employs 100 men. On this property he pays a school, road, county, state and corporation tax, and as it is inside the city limits, a city tax covering police and fire protection and all other city activities. In addition to this he pays the government income tax on any profit he makes.

Sam Smith, his neighbor, who has children that go to the public school with Bill's, whose property has the same police and fire protection, whose automobile travels on the same paved road as Bill's, and who has all advantages of city, county and state improvements that Bill does, has $100,000 invested in tax-exempt bonds and escapes all taxation which Bill has to pay to maintain the improvements which Sam enjoys.

Will Bill spend another $100,000 to enlarge his industry?

We talk about tax reduction while countenancing a system which places a premium upon tax-dodging and penalizes taxpayers who maintain industry and government.

Miss Ida Walter, 244 W. Marquette rd., is spending the summer at Nantucket Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Moore of 516 69th st., returned Saturday from a very enjoyable vacation at the Dells of Wisconsin.

Dr. and Mrs. Hagens and son, Edward, 6517 Stewart ave., leave the latter part of the week for Casper, Wyo., Yellowstone Park and Canada.

A card and bunco party will be given for the benefit of Oakhaven Old People's home at the residence of Mrs. C. M. Woodman, 6808 Normal blvd., Aug. 1st, at 2 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hokamp, 424 66th st. and family, were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leonard, 6409 Yale ave., last Sunday.

Miss Mary Larkin, 217 61st pl., returned home Sunday after a wonderful three week trip through Yellowstone Glacier Park and many other places of interest.

Mrs. E. L. Yanks and daughter, Renette, of 7001 Perry ave., and Mrs. Nelson, her sister, 908 68th st., are spending their vacation at Lakeview Cottage, Idlewild, near Muskegon, Mich.

Just received word from the Big Chief, saying that he is on his way to Chicago after spending five perfect weeks in and around Tiffin and Toledo, Ohio. He states he and Mrs. Sullivan have had a splendid time visiting with old school-day associates.

To Save Is to Have

Suppose you save 25 cents a day. That does not mean much to the average man. You won't miss it.

Yet that 25 cents a day in ten years grows to nearly a thousand dollars. And the interest, which we pay you for saving your money, brings the total to well over eleven hundred dollars.

Think of what you can do with this.

Realize Your Dreams

Just a few years of small but steady savings will bring you many of the things you are longing for. Perhaps you want a car. Perhaps you want to buy the farm next to you. Perhaps you want to start a son in business, or to go traveling, or to educate yourself or your children.

Saving will do all these. And best of all, you will have formed the saving habit and will never be one of the nine men out of every ten who pass their last years penniless—in the poorhouse or dependent on others.

The Chiropractic Conception of Disease

Now, what is deafness, blindness, loss of taste, smell or feeling, and how may it be brought about? We say that deafness, blindness, or the loss of the sense of taste, smell or touch may be—and in the largest percentage of cases is produced—by something interfering with the transmission of these vibrations from the outside to the inside, so that our conception of disease in these cases is simply a lack of the function of transmission, of vibrations from the outside to the inside, caused by a vertebra pressing upon the nerve of transmission.

This, however, is stating diseases of but one type, and we still have by far the largest half to be accounted for. In order to get the other type we must study the other functions of innate intelligence.

We say innate intelligence does all the things done in the human body and we say innate does nine separate and distinct things, each of which we call a function.

We say innate moves the body, and we call this job the motor function; that she heats the body, and this we call the calorific function; nourishes the body, and this we call the trophic function. In order to transform the food we eat and the liquid we drink into usable form, innate makes the saliva, gastric fluid, bile, pancreatic juice, etc., and this we call the secretory function, while the job of throwing the waste material out of the body through the lungs, sweat glands, kidneys and bowels we call the excretory function. Innate also builds the body (expansive function), repairs the body's wounds, burns, breaks and bruises (reparative function), and reproduces the species (reproductive function). These eight, with the job of feeling (sensory function), makes nine jobs that innate attends to.

Diseases of the sensory function—of that which comes from the outside inside—we have explained and there remains but the diseases of the other eight functions to explain, but first we must see how innate performs these eight functions.

If you are driving an automobile and see a red light in the road, the vibration is gathered by the eye, carried over the optic nerve to the brain, and is there interpreted by innate as danger. Immediately innate sends a motor impulse to the arms and legs to turn the wheel, shut off the gas, and put on the brakes. This motor impulse or command travels from the brain down through the spinal cord, out through the spinal nerves to the hands and feet, and these hands and feet obey the command. Suppose, however, that the nerve is cut over which these impulses travel, will the hand or foot obey the mind? It will not. Why? Because the message sent to the hand or foot never gets there—the line of communication between the hand and brain or the foot and brain is not in working order, so there is no motion in the hand or foot. They are paralyzed.

Daughters of Veterans Install Candidates

The last regular meeting of Mrs. Ellsworth Tent No. 5, Daughters of Veterans, held Friday evening, July 27th, was for the initiation of candidates. A class of nine was initiated into the organization. Following the meeting, refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. Among the guests were the national press correspondent, Miss Louise Chandler, the department treasurer, Mrs. Frances Wallace, past department president, F. Alice Ammen, the president of Keturah Hoover Tent No. 10 of Chicago, Mrs. Annette B. Lewis, and a past president of Ida McKinley Tent of Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Sturr. The National Alliance Daughters of Veterans is a patriotic order whose members are lineal descendents of Union veterans of the Civil war, 1861-1865. It is recognized and endorsed by the Grand Army of the Republic. Any woman or girl over 15 years old may join the organization, provided her father, grandfather, or great grandfather, and so on, was a Union soldier, sailor or marine in the Civil war. Anyone interested may address the president, Mrs. Jessie M. Anson, 6024 Green st., Chicago.

COAL!

BUY YOUR COAL NOW

If the individual house owner should keep an eye on the tactics and business principles of the owners of the big apartment buildings, he would learn many things, and among the most important--- Buy your coal now, in mid-summer."

To the man who has to heat 50 homes instead of one, this matter of the price of coal, prompt delivery and high quality is paramount, so he buys his coal supply for the entire winter during July and August, when he pays the lowest for the best, and when he gets it where he wants it, when he wants it.

To the man who must heat his own home and has struggled through a winter of exhorbitant coal prices, and has been promised delivery in some such phrase, "We'll deliver as soon as we can" (which means a couple of weeks late), the dealer's advice is not a "coal man's scheme" but an honest to goodness invitation to take advantage of the lowest prices, get the highest quality, and have the coal when he wants it.

Definition of CHIROPRACTIC

The practice of Chiropractic consists of the adjustments, with the hands, of the movable segments of the spinal column to normal position for the purpose of releasing the prisoned impulse. This definition is conclusive, and any and all other methods are hereby declared not to be Chiropractic.

A PUSH IN THE BACK and WHAT FOLLOWED

by
JAMES G. GREGGERSON, D.C.

IT is a far cry from Franklin's kite to the electric lighting, transportation and communicating systems of today, or from Watt's teakettle to the steam engines and ocean liners of the present. Yet it is no farther in either of these cases than it is from the experimental "push in the back" given to Harvey Lilliard, the deaf negro, by D. D. Palmer in 1895, to twenty-nine Chiropractic schools, over 14,000 practitioners and millions of converts to the science in 1922.

It requires performance to convert millions of people and to win place, power and prestige in a community infested with opposition, miseducation and prejudice. It requires more than bombast and profession to be acquitted by juries when prosecuted, and to inscribe laws favorable to Chiropractic on the statute books of state after state. Yet, in a quarter of a century, Chiropractic has done this; and, in addition, has developed a science, art and philosophy all its own.

This performance becomes more amazing when one considers the personnel of the profession—a motley throng recruited from every walk of life, a few of whom were almost illiterate and many of whom lacked the cultural graces of other professions.

With no other qualification in the majority of cases than an earnest desire to learn, students were enrolled in the Chiropractic schools and after six, nine, twelve or eighteen months they were turned loose upon an unsuspecting public with a diploma, totally ignorant of business and its requirements, knowing nothing of how to conduct an office, and hardly even suspecting, let alone knowing, the value of the discovery of which they were the custodians. Yet, their small stock in trade was of such tremendous value in comparison with the value of therapeutic systems that, in spite of their handicaps, in spite of their shortcomings, and in spite of bungling applications of the principles of their science, they have, collectively, and often individually, won a tremendous success in competition with those who possessed all the qualifications they lacked.

On this page you will have pleasure to consult the most thorough found in Chiropractic science.

Gregory, the Resolute's southpaw flinger had things his own way all of the route, allowing only eight hits and striking out nine men. Mills, the Midway moundsman gave way to Horton in the seventh inning when the Resolutes took their final lead.

Gallagher and Loftus lead the Resolutes at bat with two hits apiece. Gallagher also starred at shortstop with some good stops of hard hit grounders. Shaak pulled a couple spectacular catches in right field that helped to keep the Midway's score down.

The Resolutes will clash with the Auburn Eagles Sunday, August 5th, at Resolute Park, 89th and Elizabeth sts. The game promises to be a hot one as the two teams are old rivals.

Teams wanting games call Stewart 9272, ask for Fred.

Big Water Carnival at Ogden Park

Don't miss the third annual water carnival at Ogden Park next Monday evening, August 6th, at 7 o'clock. It promises to be the biggest and best yet. There will be all the usual stunts and races for the boys and girls of the park including all the old favorites such as the submarine race, the hat race, the canoe race and the amusing Rube race, not to mention the watermelon grab. But the big features of the evening will be furnished by the notable swimmers of national reputation who will be there to take part. Dick Howell, winner of the River Marathon, 1922., and America's probable representative at the next Olympic, will give an exhibition of speed swimming together with Russell Ward of Sinai Center and Cornelius Oaker. Jimmy Moran, and Miss June Epperson, both of whom hold the A. A. F. national championships, will give an exhibition of fancy diving. Miss Mary Conley of Ogden Park and Nat Newburgh, of Sinai Center will demonstrate breast stroke speed swimming in which they hold records. This interesting program will conclude with high diving specialties by Gail Erwin. Everybody is invited to be there. Don't forget the date. The program will begin promptly at 7 o'clock.

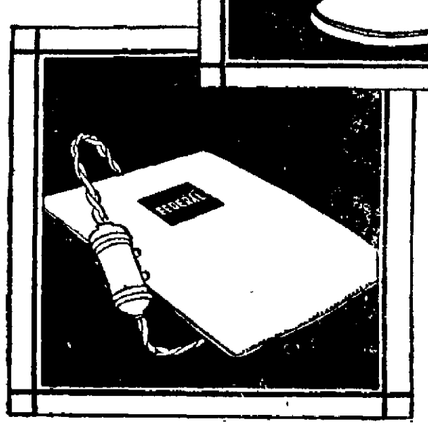
Not now, perhaps, unless there's sickness in the home, but this fall you'll find the heater and the heating pad immediately desirable.



As usual, a small down payment and monthly sums added to your electric light bill buy any of these appliances. Also redeemable with Profit Sharing Coupons.

Hamilton Park Branch Library

Many of the books received at the Hamilton Park Branch library during the past week are those that people have long been waiting for. One of them is J. A. Symonds' excellent translation of Benvenuto Cellini's autobiography, the fascinating account of the politics, art, manners and customs of the sixteenth century. Sherwood's "Childhood in Art" will be of interest to many, and Sturgis' "Short History of Architecture" is a valuable addition to the art books collection. Romain Rolland's "Musicians of Today" will find many readers, because of the author and the subject matter, and James Russell Lowell's "My Study Windows" needs no comment to introduce it to the readers of American essays. Among the more recently published books received a few days ago, is Collins' "The Doctor Looks at Literature" a delightful book of criticism of contemporary authors. Everyone interested in James Joyce, Dostoievsky, D. H. Lawrence, Dorothy Richardson will be fascinated by this volume, even if one does not always agree with the doctor. Other works of non fiction include: Hale, "What's Wrong With Our Girls"; Stowell, "Call of the Open" (Collection of nature poems); Quinn, "Contemporary American Plays"; Pence, "Short Stories by Present Day Authors"; Bridges, "As I Was Saying"; Webster, "Medieval and Modern History." All the Power You'll Ever Need

It isn't speed alone you want in a motor car; you want power and plenty of it. You want power expressed in terms of quickness on the getaway—ability to seize momentary chances to make headway in traffic—deep-chested strength that defies steep grades and heavy going.

The 50-horsepower developed by the Red Seal Continental Motor in the Columbia Specialized Six provides the speed but, what is more important, this engine has what engineers would call an excellent torque curve. It delivers ample power to the wheels at moderate driving speeds—smooth, flexible power that is immediately responsive to your every need. You'll know what we mean when you take your first ride in a Columbia.

SULLIVAN'S SENSE AND NONSENSE

LAUGHTER

Our laughter was a greater bond
than tears,
Since, having laughed together, we have grown
Wise with the wisdom of the foolish! Known
How mirth can conquer even the crowding years.
Had we but wept together, it may be
The world had said, "They sounded depths of life!
They heard the thunder of Time's pitiless strife.
Pondered on Death and dim Eternity."
O simple world, not knowing that we smiled
To hide our grief, to drown the mortal dread!—
And, old in sorrow, to each other said,
"How wise the soul that dares remain a child!"

Everyone is the architect of their own air castles.

Speaking of the late German royal wedding, she's a Kaiserin and he's a Kaiser out.

One reason Santa Claus wears a heavy beard is said to be to conceal his Christmas present necktie.

I see that in Paris they are sewing on silk eye lashes. That is a new way to keep their lamps trimmed.

The best way to solve the conjested traffic problem would be to make illegal the manufacture of Fords.

The invention to make "movies" talk is not needed nearly so much as to keep the fat woman in front of you from talking during the show.

It is not so much that men do not want women to hold office as it is that they want to hold the offices themselves.

Casey remarks that the chicken is the most useful creature created and as a reason said, "Shure, wid a chicken, yiz kin ate thim befoor they do be born or afterwards.

An Auburn Park friend in relating the improvements in his new bungalow mentioned, "Yes, we have a fireless cooker, and by the way, we also have a fireless furnace."

I noticed a sign in front of a movie show house last week reading, "Love is an awful thing—with Owen Moore." Mary Pickford seems to have thought the same after she got the crush on Doug.

In answer to the inane query to an autoist who was sweating over a tire, "What is the matter, have you a puncture?" the sarcastic victim answered cooly, "Oh, no; I'm just changing the air in the tires."

An old cowboy friend of mine from Montana took dinner with me at the College cafe this week, and as the steak came decorated with watercress, he remarked, "I don't care for alfalfa on my steak, nohow."

It must make the Imperial Klaxton of the Ku Klux Klan, and the primate pomposos of the Royal Order of Rhinosorio a bit jealous when the once Imperial Kaiser calls the new wife her Imperial Majesty.

Europe has become accustomed to having America come to their rescue in time of trouble, so that when they hear the crack of doom, they will expect America to furnish the fire extinguishers.

A Village Boy's Return Home

Most of the grown men and women in our part of the city are not native-born Chicagoans, but came originally from the country or some small town or village, and always down in our hearts we have longed for a return to the locality honored by our birth. The days of automobiles, with the splendid, hard roads, and pleasures of travel, have given many of us this longed-for opportunity. We load up the "tin Lizzie" or the Rolls-Royce, if we are newspaper millionaires, with our luggage, a few thermos bottles and a lemon, and leave the sullen, smoky skies behind as we hie north, south, east or west, it makes little difference, as we came from all over.

How beautiful is the scenery and the rolling prairies with their fields of waving grain, or freshly-plowed for the crop, in either case it looks beautiful to us, who have not seen the naked earth for many moons. The rag weed and mullen, the exasperating thistles and daisy-topped milk weeds are all flowers to us, rarer than those in the Washington Park conservatory. The old snake rail fence, and its extravagant angles have given way to trimmer wire of panels; the old log cabin, former residences of the farmer, are supplanted by comfortable large homes, surrounded by beautiful lawns and orchards. Notice every barn is big and broad, and in the driveway, instead of the stilted high buggy we see at least one automobile. Another new feature for us older fellows are the silos, those big inverted barrel structures placed at the ends of the big barns, and in which green fodder is preserved indefinitely. The old spring has been built over with a cement-floored milk house, and the spring water piped to the house and barns by modern methods. In fact, many of the farm houses have ice houses, and some even patent refrigerator plants, as well as acetylene gas lighting plants, or even electricity for residence, barns and outhouses. These, however, are the places we do not recognize, as we did not acknowledge the gentleman (?) farmer in our days.

We see a sandy lane leading from the road and drive in, and through the leafy branches of the trees we see glimpses of a stream, sparkling and bright; it clutters over sand and pebbles as pretty as a diamond, the temptation is to great and off comes our shoes and stockings as we once more bathe our feet in Nature's bath tub, and we chortle and chuckle as musically as the ripples of the little stream. The kiddies who accompany us do not think much of the little creek, and begin at once to compare it with Lake Michigan, or even the semi-fluid Chicago river, but when we show them the minnows swimming along and under the stones bring forth a crawfish, they see the wonders of it also, but not as we see it, with the eyes of our childhood, when it was a mighty river to us, and the wonder of our limited world. The prepared luncheon was postponed and we insisted upon building an improvised stove on which we put the frying pan and cooked a lucullan repast, which even the jaded city appetites appreciated. Then came a pipe, followed by a short nap, and we were on our way again.

Soon we came to a pretty little village, the central part of which was as modern as a city street, but on the outskirts where the farms just begin to draggle away into the village, we pass the old-time houses, some that front the road we recall as taverns and stage coach stations in the olden days, but a glaring red pump now outstares one, and we know it is a filling station, "with water and air free." It is wonderful how many of these filling stations we see, in a town of six shops, at least four of them have filling stations, and as all rush out at each passing car, they give you a savage look if you do not patronize their special brand of "best" gas. Also along the highway you come across dainty little tea rooms that furnish light lunches and lighter drinks with the inevitable ice cream cones.

To us busy city people whose time is all so well occupied, we wonder when, if ever, these village characters get to do their work, and if they have any work. Yet we hear continuously of the poor, hard-worked farmer and his calloused hands, evidently made so by industrious whittling. Right here take a word of warning—never ask one of these chaps to guide you on your way, as willfully or not, they will set you wrong, and consider it quite a joke "on that 'ere city chap." The roads are wonderful, and it is also wonderful how the highway commission can possibly select such very, very bad roads for detours where new work is under way. We followed one of them religiously, all but our language, for eight miles, and credited six years' wear up to our car, but with another we took a different road than the one prescribed, simply guiding ourselves by our knowledge of direction, and found fairly good travel. Another matter that effects motorists is the poor markings of routes through larger towns and cities, but a good guide sheet, such as is kept up to date by the Chicago Motor club and its correspondents, enables one to get through comfortably.

There is much to admire in almost any direction, beautiful hills and dales, and at every turn a new vista of beauty. There is an absence of the dense forests of a generation ago, but in many cases owners have let part of their woodland stand, thinning out, of course, all of the heavy timber, and in many cases new timber planted a generation ago by some wise forefather already is bringing its reward. Many trees planted in rows as windbreaks have grown tall and beautiful, and nearly every farm has an orchard of selected fruits, whose beautiful blossoms and leafery is as well appreciated as its fruits. At many crossroads, especially when near a clean stream, a creamery or dairy will be found, and a cool glass of buttermilk, or even the genuine milk, is a better toddy than served by a city bootlegger. Really handsome churches with artistic lines are numerous, many of the frame structures now giving place to those of brick and fancy stone, and the one-room schools are almost rare, but in their place in the center of the township will be found a union school of from eight to twenty rooms, modern to the last degree, and with a corps of teachers all Normal school graduates.

It required a journey of several days to come to the one particular village we were seeking, but twenty miles away I began recognizing familiar places. Here and there stood an old home or barn that we knew years agone, and we took a detour to pass a familiar spot near an old cider mill, where often we visited in the fall with "our best girl," and adjoining her father's farm. A devastating fire some years ago took the old homestead, barn and many buildings, but an old log structure, once the family home back in the '40s, still stood and we took pleasure in whittling away some of the wood to show it had been built of solid black walnut, now almost worth its weight in gold if sound. The old "gum" stood in the spring, but was broken down and almost useless, as a deep well had been drilled nearer the new home. Passing on to the village we noted the old shingle factory, which had been revamped into an auto and tire repair shop. Down the street was the village pump, but the old square wooden screecher had given place to a model Y. M. C. A. fountain, and the old tavern just across the way did its best by advertising soft drinks and coffee. Red gasoline pumps were as numerous as on a boulevard in the city; the blacksmith shop was a repair shop, and the livery stable housed iron and steel horses from Henry Ford's farm. The grandson of the village doctor presided at the same old desk, and it looked as if the same old pens were on duty. The drug store may have had drugs for sale, but all that was put forward was an ambitious soda fountain, candies, and light literature. The old Memorial hall, erected soon after the civil war, floated the stars and stripes, and a jaunty young chap in khaki uniform returned our salutes, and pointed out to us the new monument they had just dedicated to the young heroes of the world war, and not fifty feet away was the monument we had seen erected to their grandfathers, heroes of '61 to '65.

Just a very few of the old houses stood as they were a generation ago. Most had been rebuilt and changed, enlarged, and many torn down to make room for the more modern stucco-covered bungalows and colonial cottages. It was familiar after awhile, but reminded one more of an old friend we meet for the first time after a devastating illness; it was the same, but not the same; the old faces of old friends and comrades were gone, and such as were left scarcely knew who we were. Only one old lady, who vehemently assured our grandchildren that we "were the worst scholars she ever had for mischief, and she had to 'rod' us many a time." The old swimming hole is gone, and there isn't a foot of water where we took twenty-foot dives. The old covered wooden bridge is replaced by modern concrete arches, and, in fact, it isn't the old town at all; and we drove fast to make the next big town, sorely disappointed that our old home didn't stand still, while we moved on. But it was worth the visit, and we are sure old Father Time took off a decade or two when he noted our time for going.

Legion Dance for Benefit Disabled Soldiers

Plans are now going forward among the members of Englewood Post, American legion for a big street dance, similar in character to the one held last year which proved to be a great success.

Last year's dance, which was held during the Englewood Pageant of Progress, was staged on 64th st. between Halsted and Green. Traffic was diverted from this block during the entire week that the dance was in progress, the street was strung with gaily colored electric lights, and each night hundreds of people danced there to the strains of a good orchestra.

It has been decided to hold the dance in the same location this year, which will make it handy and accessible to every one. August 6th to 11th are the dates chosen for the affair. The Hefferan Society orchestra will furnish the music, and light refreshments will be served. The people back of the affair wish to emphasize the fact that only clean dancing will be tolerated, and that every one attending is assured of a good time.
